CHAPTER I:

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background

An internship provides students with a valuable opportunity to apply theoretical knowledge in a real-world professional setting. As part of the Bachelor of Business Management (BBM) program at Tribhuvan University, students are required to undertake a practical internship to enhance their understanding of workplace environments and business operations. This hands-on experience serves as a bridge between academic learning and career development.

The internship allows students to observe and participate in day-to-day business functions, thereby developing essential skills and gaining insight into professional expectations. During my internship period, I was placed at Shangrila Blu Hotel Pvt. Ltd., where I was involved in activities such as accounting, bookkeeping and financial documentation. This practical exposure has broadened my perspective and deepened my understanding of how business operate.

Through this internship, I not only learned technical aspects of accounting practices but also developed soft skills such as communication, time management and teamwork. The experience has contributed significantly to my academic journey and has helped prepare me for future professional challenges.

1.2 Current trend of the subject

In today's rapidly evolving financial landscape, the role of accounting has become more diverse and technologically driven. Traditional manual accounting systems are being replaced by advanced software that allows for real-time financial tracking, automated calculations, and comprehensive data management. Tools like Tally, QuickBooks, and other ERP systems are widely used to enhance efficiency and accuracy in financial reporting.

Accountants today handle a wide range of responsibilities beyond basic bookkeeping. These include preparing financial statements, managing payroll, ensuring compliance with tax regulations, and overseeing internal audits. A crucial part of their role also involves conducting bank reconciliations, preparing bank-related documentation, handling loan and credit processing, and maintaining regular communication with financial institutions to manage cash flows and transactions.

In addition, they are involved in budgeting, forecasting, and financial analysis to support strategic decision-making within the organization. They also supervise junior staff, verify financial record, and ensure that all accounting practices align with legal standards and organizational policies.

The current trend emphasizes the need for accounting professionals to be well-versed not only in financial theory but also in practical skills and software tools. As such, internship programs like the one required in the BBM program at Tribhuvan University play a crucial role in preparing students to meet these industry demands by exposing them to real-world tasks and expectations in the field of finance and accounting.

1.3 Objectives

The primary objective of this internship was to bridge the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical application in the field of accounting and finance. By working in a real business environment, I aimed to gain hands-on experience with financial documentation, bookkeeping, and reporting systems.

Specific objectives of the internship include:

- To observe and understand the day-to-day responsibilities of professional accountants and how accounting systems function in a real-world setting.
- To gain practical experience in preparing journal entries, ledgers, trial balances, and financial statements.
- To understand the procedures related to bank transactions, including bank reconciliations, preparing deposit and withdrawal slips, and communicating with banks and financial operations.
- To assist in payroll preparation, tax documentation, and compliance-related tasks under the guidance of a senior accountant.
- To develop professional skills such as time management, communication, teamwork, and problem-solving in a business environment.

- To explore how accounting supports boarder business functions such as budgeting, financial, planning and internal audits.

1.4 Methodology

The methodology of this internship report is based on both primary and secondary sources of information to ensure a comprehensive understanding of the work environment and practices in the field of accounting and finance.

Primary Data Sources

Primary data was collected through direct involvement and observation during the internship period at Shangrila Blu Hotel Pvt. Ltd. These include hands-on experience in accounting tasks such as voucher entry, ledger posting, bank reconciliation, and the preparation of financial statement. Interaction and communication with auditor and other staff members to understand accounting procedures and business operations. Participation in meeting and discussions related to financial reporting, payroll processing, and compliance tasks.

Secondary Data Sources

Secondary data was gathered to support and supplement the knowledge acquired through primary means. These include company documentations, manuals, and reports that provided insights into the financial practices. Online articles, research papers, and relevant websites that offered current trends and best practices in accounting and financial management. Government and regulatory guidelines on tax, auditing and financial compliance applicable to business organizations in Nepal.

This mixed-method approach allowed for a well-rounded and evidence-based report, combining practical exposure with academic and industry-based knowledge to meet the objectives of the internship program.

1.4.1 Organization Selection

I selected Shangrila Blu Hotel Pvt. Ltd. for my internship because it is a newly established hospitality business, which provided a unique opportunity to work in a developing environment. The hotel was in its initial phase of operations, which meant I has access to a wide range of responsibilities and learning experiences that might not be available in more established organizations. Additionally, there was no dedicated accountant at the time of my application, making it easier to join and contribute in the accounting and finance department. This allowed me to apply my theoretical knowledge in real-world scenario and gain practical exposure in financial recordings, transaction management, and hospitality industry accounting systems.

Moreover, the application process was simple and accessible. Unlike many large-scale organizations that have competitive selection procedures, the relatively small size of Shangrila Blu Hotel made the onboarding process smoother. I was also motivated by the fact that I could make a visible impact in a short period and contribute to the growth of new business.

1.4.2 Placement/Duration/Activities

Placement

On the 10th September 2024 internee was placed to Shangrila Blu Hotel Pvt. Ltd. located at Bakhundole, Lalitpur. My placement was arranged through the auditor and the CEO of the company. As the company was newly established and had not yet appointed an accountant, the auditor initially supervised and signed off on my work. Before the official placement began, I completed some tasks from home under the auditor's/CA guidance. Once the company setup progressed, the CEO called me in to begin the on-site placement.

Duration

The duration of internship period has been defined for 8 weeks by Tribhuvan University but to explore more in organization, interne added more months and accomplished internship for half year in Shangrila Blu Hotel Pvt. Ltd.

Activities

Different task that I performed during my internship:

- Prepare monthly financial reports.
- Handled accounting tasks.
- Created internal reports as assigned by the CEO.
- Manage payroll processing.

- Calculated VAT and TDS and verifying the PAN details.
- Used IRD system for tax-related tasks.
- Performed all accounting work using excel.

1.4.3 Work Procedure

All the financial work are created and maintained from excel sheets using formulas and functions for calculations which ensure accuracy and consistency in financial data. I collected financial data from daily transaction through journal entry and organize it to prepare monthly income and expenses reports and submitted reports to the CEO for review. Maintained Ledgers and reconciled balances and ensured all entries were accurate and up to date. Gathering necessary data and created customized reports. Visited the bank for deposits, withdrawals, and inquiries. Maintained proper record of all bank-related activities. Coordinated with the CEO regarding fund transfer. Collected attendance, salary details and calculated salaries, deductions, and net pay. Prepared payroll sheets and shared with management. Calculated VAT and TDS according to applicable rates. Maintained records for audits and compliance purposes. Logged in to IRD portal using authorized credentials. Generated tax payment details and filled reports as required.

1.4.4 Tools Used

- Microsoft Excel: For recording transaction, maintaining ledgers, payroll calculations, and generating reports.
- IRD Portal: For filing VAT and TDS returns, and other tax-related tasks.
- Banking Service: For deposits, withdrawals, fund transfers, and account management.
- Email & Communication Tools: For submitting reports and communicating with the debtors and creditors.

- Printed Forms/Documented Used: Such as Payment Voucher, Receipt Voucher, Journal Voucher, Bank Deposit/Withdrawal Slips, Cheque Books, Payroll Sheet, Attendance Register, Internal Report Templates, Tax Filing Receipt/Confirmations.

1.4.5 Limitation

Every field of study has some or the other limitations and so in the case of the internship as well. There are some limitations that are faced at the time of my report preparation and they are as follows:

- The study is based on experience from a single organization.
- The report relies on available data and information provided by the staff and own experience.
- Lack of use of advanced accounting software limited practical learning in digital tools.
- The internship was conducted during the early phase of the organization, so many systems were still in development.
- A complete overview of all departments and operations could not be obtained.
- No dedicated supervisor was assigned except for the external auditor, resulting in limited daily communication and guidance.

CHAPTER II:

INTRODUCTION OF THE INDUSTRY

2.1 Introduction of Industry

Contribute greatly to economic growth, job generation, and cultural exchange, the hospitality business is essential for the worldwide economy. Thriving off keeping great customer service standards and offering unforgettable experience, it is among the active industries. The tourism industry is a vital sector of the global economy that encompasses the activities of people outside their usual environment for leisure, business or other purposes. It includes various services such as transportation, accommodation, food and beverage, entertainment, and cultural experiences. Tourism not only contributes significantly to GDP and employment in many countries but also fosters cultural exchange and international understanding. Over the years, it has evolved from a luxury activity for the elite into a widespread and accessible experience, thanks to globalization, improved transportation, and digital technologies.

The industry can be divided into several types, including domestic, international, inbound, and outbound tourism. It is also influenced by factors such as seasonality, economic conditions, political stability, and environmental sustainability.

The tourism industry has evolved significantly over centuries, transforming from a privilege of the elite into a global economic powerhouse. In ancient civilizations such as Greece, Rome, and Egypt, travel was primarily undertaken by the wealthy for leisure, education, or religious pilgrimages. During the Middle Ages, tourism declined due to political instability and limited transport options, though religious pilgrimages remained a common form of travel. The concept of modern tourism began to emerge during the 17th and 18th centuries with the “Grand Tour”, where young European aristocrats traveled across the continent for cultural and educational enrichment. The industrial revolution in the 19th century marked a major turning point, as technological advancements like the steam engine, railways, and later automobiles made travel more accessible and affordable. Organized travel gained popularity, spearheaded by pioneers like Thomas Cook, who introduced the first package tours. The 20th century witnessed the rapid growth of mass tourism, particularly after World War II, fueled by rising incomes, the expansion of commercial aviation, and increased leisure time. The introduction of budget airlines, globalization, and digital platforms in the late 20th and early 21st centuries revolutionized travel planning and accessibility. However, the COVID-19 pandemic brought the industry to a near standstill, prompting innovations in health protocols, digital services, and a renewed emphasis on domestic and sustainable tourism.

The hotel industry is a key segment of the broader hospitality and tourism sector, focused on providing accommodation, food, and various guest services to travelers and tourists. It dates back to ancient times when inns and guesthouses offered lodging to merchants and pilgrims. Hotels diversified into various types, including luxury hotels, budget hotels, resorts, boutique hotels, and business hotels, catering to different customer needs and preferences. Technologies innovations, such as online booking platforms, mobile apps, and digital check-ins, have significantly transformed the industry in recent decades. Global hotel chains like Marriott, Hilton, and Hyatt have set standards in service, branding, and international expansion. Modern hotels often offer various amenities such as room service, restaurants, fitness centers, conference rooms, spas, and Wi-Fi. The industry is highly customer-focused and competitive with success depending on service quality, cleanliness, pricing, location, and customer satisfaction.

The hotel industry contributes significantly to the global economy by generating employment, supporting tourism, and driving regional travel agencies, airlines, and event planners, forming a vital part of the travel and tourism ecosystem.

2.2 Brief Introduction of Industry in Nepal

Nepal's tourism industry is a vital pillar of the national economy, deeply rooted in the country's natural, cultural, and spiritual heritage. Known globally for the majestic Himalayas, including Mount Everest, as well as UNESCO World Heritage Sites, ancient temples, diverse ethnic cultures, and unique traditions, Nepal attracts millions of tourists each year. Among the various sectors that support tourism, the hotel industry plays a central role, providing essential accommodation, food and hospitality services to both domestic and international visitors.

Hotels in Nepal range from luxury resorts and star-rated urban hotels to eco-lodges, budget hostels, and rural homestays. This wide variety of lodging options not only enhances the tourist experience but also ensures that travelers of all economic backgrounds are accommodated. The hotel industry in Nepal has grown steadily to meet the demands of increasing tourist arrivals, with investments in infrastructure, service quality, and international standards. Major cities like Kathmandu, Pokhara, and Chitwan have a wide range of hotels catering to various budgets and preferences. The hotel industry significantly contributes to the country's economic development, generating millions of dollars in revenue annually. It stimulated growth in other sectors such as agriculture, transportation, handicrafts, and retail, creating a positive ripple effect throughout the economy.

Moreover, the hotel and tourism sector are a major source of employment, providing direct and indirect jobs to hundreds of thousands of people across the country. From hotel managers and chefs to tour guides, cleaners, and construction workers, the industry offers diverse job opportunities, often in regions where other forms of employment are limited. It also promotes entrepreneurship, particularly through small hotels and homestay programs in rural and remote areas.

Beyond economics, the tourism and hotel industry are a source of national pride, showcasing Nepal's rich heritage, hospitality, and natural wonders to the world. It plays a crucial role in preserving cultural traditions and encouraging sustainable practices. Events like "Visit Nepal" campaigns reflect the country's effort to promote itself as a top travel destination and strengthen its global identity.

Despite challenges such as political instability, natural disasters, and the COVID-19 pandemic, Nepal's hotel industry continues to evolve by adopting modern technologies, improving service standards, and focusing on eco-friendly and community-based tourism. Its growth is not only essential for economic recovery and development but also for building Nepal's International reputation and cultural preservation.

3.4 Organizational Structure

The organization structure of the hotel industry is typically hierarchical designed to ensure smooth coordination of services and operations across various departments. It clearly defines the chain of command, from top management to front-line staff, allowing for efficient accountability. Most hotels are divided into functional departments such as front office, housekeeping, food and beverage, kitchen, sales and marketing, human resources, finance, maintenance, and security. Each department is responsible for specific tasks that contribute to the overall guest experience.

Shangrila Blu Hotel follows a functional organizational structure, where responsibilities are divided among key specialized departments to ensure seamless operations and a high standard of guest service.

Table 3: Organization Structure

This figure titled “Fig 1.1 Organizational Structure” illustrates organizational structure of Shangrila Blu Hotel Pvt. Ltd. At the top is the CEO, followed by the General Manager. This structure shows a clear top-down reporting system, with departmental heads reporting to the General Manager, who in turn reports to the CEO. Together, these departments operate under the direction of the General Manager and collaborate to uphold Shangrila Blu reputation for excellence in hospitality.

3.5 Hierarchy of Management

The hierarchy of management in the hotel industry refers to the structured levels of authority and responsibility within the organization. It is typically divided into three main levels: top-level management, middle management, and operational management.

Position	Reports To
CEO	—
General Manager	CEO

F&B Manager	General Manager
F&B Associates	F&B Manager
Event Manager	General Manager
Event Assistant	Event Manager

Table 4 Hierarchy of Management

The organizational hierarchy presented in the document follows a vertical and departmentalized structure, characteristic of a functional organizational model commonly used in the hospitality industry. At the apex is the Chief Executive Officer (CEO), representing the top-level executive authority, responsible for overall strategic oversight. Directly beneath, the General Manager hold the senior-level management positions, indicating a dual emphasis on operational coordination and financial governance. Middle management is divided into specialized departments- Finance, Housekeeping, Front Office, Food & Beverage(F&B), Culinary/Kitchen, and Events each led by the departmental managers (e.g. Housekeeping Manager, Front Office Manager, Executive Chef). These mangers supervise clearly define subordinate roles, reflecting a clear chain of command and division of labor. The presence of positions like Room Attendant, Dishwasher, or Event Assistant at the base of the structure represents operational staff, emphasizing task specialization and functional dependency.

Notably, the structure suggests limited cross-functional interaction, which supports operational efficiency but may reduce agility. This hierarchical framework enables accountability, operational clarity, and centralized control, ideal for service-oriented establishments requiring standardized processes and role-specific responsibilities.

3.4.2 Hierarchy of Decision-Making Process

In the hotel industry, the decision-making process is structured through a hierarchical and departmentalized system to ensure smooth operations, effective service delivery, and accountability. At the top of this hierarchy is the CEO, who provides the strategic vision and long-term goals for the organization. Directly beneath the CEO and the General manager, who is responsible for implementing the CEO's vision at the operational level, overseeing all hotel departments, and ensuring that the organization functions efficiently. The General Manager acts as the central decision-making hub for hotel operations, bridging upper management and departmental heads.

Each major department within the hotel such as Front Office, Housekeeping, Finance, Food and Beverage(F&B), Culinary and events is managed by departmental managers. These managers make key operational decisions specific to their areas, supervise staff, manage budgets, and ensure service standards are met. They also collaborate with other departments to maintain consistency and guest satisfaction across the hotel. Beneath them, supervisors or line managers handle day-to-day tasks and staff management, providing direction and solving immediate operational issues.

At the base of the hierarchy are operational staff members like Room Attendants, Maintenance Workers, Waitstaff and Event Assistants, who are responsible for executing assigned duties and directly interacting with guests. Decision-making at this level is task-specific and guided by clear instructions from supervisors. Overall, this multi-level decision-making process ensures that strategic decisions flow from the top while operational efficiency and service quality are maintained through effective communication, delegation, and accountability at every level of the hotel's structure

5.1 Conclusion

My internship experience at Shangrila Blu Hotel in the finance department has been both enriching and transformative. It provided me with a comprehensive understanding of the financial management processes that are vital to the smooth operation and profitability of the luxury hotel. Through hands-on involvement, I gained practical knowledge in areas such as budgeting, cash flow management, cost control, revenue optimization, and financial reporting.

During the internship, I faced real-world challenges, including managing seasonal fluctuations in cash flow, adjusting pricing strategies to enhance occupancy, and ensuring accuracy in financial documentation. Addressing these challenges allowed me to develop critical analytical and problem-solving skills, and to appreciate the importance of accuracy, timeliness and compliance in financial operations.

Moreover, the collaborative work environment gave me exposure to cross-departmental coordination, as I worked closely with teams from operations and sales to align financial goals with overall hotel objectives. This experience broadened my perspective on how finance integrates with other functions to drive business success.

The mentorship and support from the finance team at Shangrila Blu Hotel were instrumental in my professional growth. They encouraged me to take initiative, ask questions, and apply innovative solutions to everyday problems. As a result, I am confident that the skills and knowledge I have acquired during this internship will serve as a strong foundation for my future career in hospitality finance.

Overall, this internship has not only enhanced my technical capabilities but also improved my communication, teamwork, and adaptability, making me better prepared to contribute effectively in any professional setting. 5.2 Lessons Learnt

My experience as an accountant at Shangrila Blu Hotel was deeply enriching, offering not just technical exposure but also valuable life and workplace lessons. I learned the critical importance of precision and consistency in financial management, as I was responsible for handling complex transactions across departments such as rooms, F&B, and events. Through this, I gained hands-on knowledge in budgeting, revenue analysis and reconciliation. One of the most significant lessons I learned was how financial accuracy directly impacts guest satisfaction and overall business performance. Additionally, I learned to work effectively across departments, which taught me how to communicate clearly, listen actively, and adapt my approach based on each team's needs. A major takeaway from this role was the importance of emotional intelligence. I learned to navigate different personalities from highly driven senior managers to more reserved back-office staff adapting my tone and approach to maintain professionalism and trust. I also learned how to manage and observe office politics with integrity, recognizing when to assert myself, when to remain neutral and how to handle sensitive situations tactfully. These experiences taught me how to stay grounded, respect diverse opinions, and manage workplace dynamics without losing focus on my responsibilities. Perhaps most importantly, I learned that success in a high-pressure, multicultural environment like Shangrila Blu requires not only technical skills but also patience, diplomacy, and a strong sense of personal ethics. These lessons have prepared me to contribute more thoughtfully and effectively in any professional setting.

5.3 Recommendation

During my time at Shangrila Blu Hote, I gained valuable insights into the organizational dynamics and workplace culture, leading me to several key recommendations. One important area is the need for structured communication and better interpersonal understanding across departments. Given the diversity in personalities and working styles, I believe implementing regular soft skills and emotional intelligence training would greatly enhance collaboration and reduce friction among staff. Establishing a peer mentorship system would support new employees in adapting to the work culture more quickly and confidently. These changes would not only improve the day-to-day work atmosphere but also build a stronger sense of unity, trust, and mutual respect among staff.

As Shangrila Blu Hotel is in its growth stage, it is important to lay a strong foundation for long-term success. To smoothly transition into the maturity stage, I recommend establishing consistent feedback systems from both guests and staff. This will help the hotel stay responsive to service expectations and internal improvements. Investing in staff development, promoting open communication, and recognizing employee contributions will strengthen the workplace culture and service quality. These steps will support sustained growth and ensure the hotel remains competitive and guest-focused in the long run.
